Audio Script

While zoologists were observing the forest, they noticed the clouded leopard, which is a magnificent creature that most people might not know about. You must consider that it lives in dense forests next to the majestic emerging mountains. This elusive feline can be spotted in regions such as the Himalayas, Northeast Asia, and South China. Setting it apart from a lot of other leopards, its distinctive appearance catches the eye. If you see a clouded leopard, you can see that it shows a remarkable range of colors. You can see from shades of brown to yellowish-gray. The clouded leopard's fur is covered with irregular stripes and spots in a dusky-gray color. You have to realize that this often makes people think that they have seen something that looks like clouds. With a tail that could grow up to an impressive 91 cm long, the clouded leopard uses its tail in order to move and balance on tree branches. An intriguing characteristic of this unique feline is its remarkable ability to climb down vertical tree trunks headfirst because it shows its exceptional climbing skills. During the day, the clouded leopard needs to rest in the trees because of feeling safe and protected. However, when night comes, the clouded leopard becomes a hunter in the night, on the forest floor. These animals would rather eat meat, preying on small animals, birds, and rodents to satisfy its carnivorous appetite that they are going to hunt for their next meal. If you see one of these animals in your lifetime, you will probably be amazed by its strange beauty.
